

Stefan Sacchi, Alexander Salvisberg & Marlis Buchmann, 2009:

Neue Kenngrößen zur Schweizer Stellenmarktentwicklung
(New indicators of the development of the Swiss job market) in: Die Volkswirtschaft, 3-2009: 57-60.

[abstract]

The Swiss Job Market Monitor in the Institute of Sociology at the University of Zurich constantly monitors the volume and composition of the jobs available in Switzerland. The Adecco Swiss Job Market Index, launched last November, now offers, for the first time, a quarterly measurement of job availability across the whole economy. Annual sample surveys of job ads from the press and the internet also allow statements about long-term shifts in the structure of staff demand in businesses from 1950 to the present.